

THE ONE NOBODY PLANS FOR

Spring is the worst week of the year

Everything that fell on frozen ground from November onward is still there. It thaws at once, the smell arrives with the first warm afternoon, and the lawn underneath comes back yellow.

A one-time cleanup handles it in a single visit — any yard, any condition, no plan required. Or start a weekly plan in March and the problem never builds up again.

One-time reset

No plan, no commitment. Book it once and see the lawn again.

Or put it on a schedule

Weekly from the thaw means there is never a spring clear-out to dread.

GET ON THE SCHEDULE

Book the reset, or the routine

A one-time cleanup needs no plan. A residential plan gets the first cleanup free, however long it has been.

SPRING & SUMMER

Thaw, then flies

March — the thaw

A winter of waste surfaces in a week. This is when most people call, and when a single reset visit does the most visible good.

April — the burn

Nitrogen concentrated under each pile kills the grass beneath it. Reseeding a burnt lawn costs more than a year of weekly service.

June — flies and smell

Heat turns a tolerable yard into one nobody sits in. Weekly is the only frequency that keeps ahead of it.

August — the parasites

Warm, damp soil is where roundworm and hookworm wait. Removing waste weekly is what breaks the cycle.

AUTUMN & WINTER

Hidden, then frozen

October — under the leaves

Leaf fall hides everything, which is exactly when it gets stepped in. We walk the whole yard, not the visible parts.

November — the last mow

Whatever is out there when the mowing stops will still be out there in March unless somebody removes it.

January — frozen solid

We keep coming. Frozen waste is easier to lift than thawed waste, and it means no spring backlog.

Year round

Service does not pause for weather. Neither do the dogs.

The whole yard

Walked in a pattern, not skimmed for the obvious.

Hauled away
